

Michael D. Lynch is the retired Senior Vice President of Legal Services of the Beacon Mutual Insurance Company. In this role, Mike worked with workers' compensation stakeholders and policymakers to help resolve and prevent workers' compensation legal issues. Mike also oversaw and practiced at a staff counsel law office whose attorneys exclusively represented the insureds of Beacon in matters before the Rhode Island Workers' Compensation Court. Prior to Beacon, Mike was a partner in the Providence law firm of Higgins, Cavanagh & Cooney where he practiced primarily in the area of workers' compensation defense. He represented employers, insurance carriers, and self-insureds in matters before the Rhode Island Workers' Compensation Court and the Rhode Island Department of Labor and Training.

Mike was also a long-time member of the Governor's Insurance Council, Fellow of the Rhode Island Bar Foundation, active leader with the International Association of Industrial Accident Boards and Commissions and the American Association of State Compensation Insurance Funds, and a plethora of other public and private organizations relating to workers' compensation, insurance, and prominent non-profit entities in Rhode Island.
